Norma Jenkins, a teacher at UofSC, has walked all the way to her favorite coffee shop to find that it is closed.

She's going to be extra cranky the entire day if she doesn't get her morning coffee.

She opens our app and looks up coffee on campus.

The app pulls up a list of different coffee shops on and around campus along with their rating and distances from her.

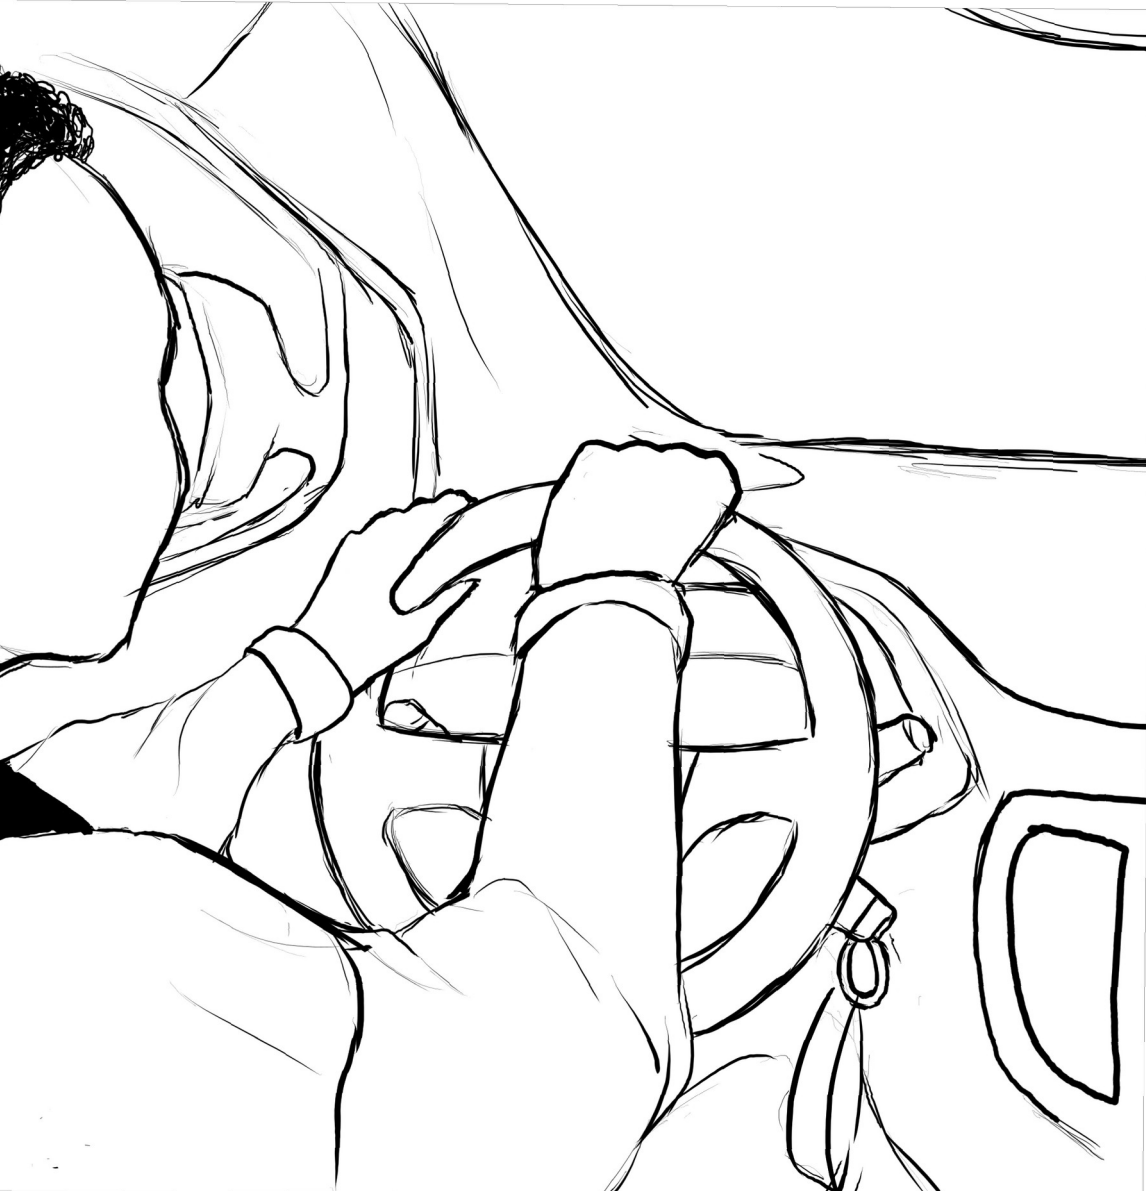

She picks the top rated cafe and the app maps her there.

She gets herself a cup of joe and the world is right again.

Alisa is a new student at UofSC, having started her classes only a week ago.

She's heading to her first Wednesday class of the semester.

She gets lost trying to find her classroom, having walked a good while around campus looking for the right building.

A student asks her if she needs any help...

...which prompts Alisa to explain her predicament.

The student tells Alisa about our app, which helps students navigate campus and find available space to study, plan activities, or advertise business opportunities.

Alisa downloads
the app on her phone and types
the location of her classroom.

10 minutes later...

Alisa gets to class on time and has a new app to help her navigate college!

Cecilia is the hard-working manager for her organization Upward Stride that has been meeting at a local place that other members work at...

...but the building needs to be renovated and cannot be used for a long while.

She asked around at nearby locations if their organization could meet, but either the place was booked, or she didn't know how to book at that place.

Frustrated, she looked up ways to book at locations and eventually found our app. She found that she was able to see all nearby rooms/areas that were available or already booked.

She also found that she was able to get directions on how to get to the location.

Cecilia was now able to book a place for her organization to meet and was even able to give directions on how to get there once inside the building.

GROUP

She presented her finding to other members of her organization and were able to make a group on the app that would show where and when they will be meeting.

She was very happy with the app, and she now know what locations are available and directions to navigate a new building for both her and her organization.
